

COVID-19 Assurance Assessment Services

What is it?

The COVID-19 Assurance Assessment service provides a framework for organisations to develop robust protocols and arrangements designed to effectively manage the risk of transmission of COVID-19 as far as is reasonably practicable within their workplace.

The British Safety Council COVID-19 return to the workplace guidance document provides a selection of specific types of control measure which can be combined to provide the best practical protection to employees and others within the workplace.

The guidance is divided into two distinct areas, risk management and control measures.

Who is it for?

The guidance is for organisations of all sectors and sizes and provides a framework for their relevant protocols and arrangements. Our assurance assessment service then provides detailed technical support in effective implementation of the guidance together with relevant sector guidelines (as appropriate).

How does it work?

The assessment assurance process is carried out initially through a remote based review of the COVID-19 specific procedures, risk assessments and controls, with an option of on-site operational sampling as part of the review.

Upon satisfactory completion of this review process, an assurance statement will be issued, together with a summary report and recommendations for improvement if appropriate.

Specific areas of support and guidance can also be provided across the five primary elements of the COVID-19 guidance, in terms of development, implementation and monitoring.

Primary elements include:

1. Risk management and organisational context
2. Operational processes and risk assessment
3. Health and wellbeing
4. Stakeholder engagement
5. Facilities and workplace adjustments.
